Hundreds Of Nurses Promoted; Thousand More Just Ahead; Corps Chiefs Praise Act

ALMOST 500 Nurse Corps officers have won promotion in the Army, Navy and Air Force since passage last August of the Nurses Career Incentive Act. More than 1,000 others are expected to be announced by the Army and Navy late this month or early in January. The three Nurse Corps Chiefs told THE JOURNAL the legislation already has greatly improved the morale of Service Nurses.

Although four months have passed since the Act was signed into law, Col. Inez Haynes, Chief of Army Nurses, said she still is receiving "expressions of gratification" from the field and from Army commands overseas. These letters,

Navy Demands $3777.16 Of Dropped Officer; Says "Unknown Circumstances" To Blame

THE Navy has told an already distraught Arlington, Va., family it must pay the Government $3,777.16 because one Navy officer didn't know what another Navy office was doing.

The victims of what the Navy termed "unknown circumstances" are former Cdr. Robert B. Rueger, USN-Ret., his wife and children.

In a letter delivered just six days before Christmas, the family was told it would have to come up with almost $4,000 to cover the Navy error.

The action dealt a new blow to a family already torn by disaster.

Here is the chronological sequence of events which took place before the Navy learned of its mistake from a civilian parole officer:

Commander Rueger was retired from the Navy in 1955 after almost 30 years' service, during which time he rose through the enlisted, warrant officer and officer grades to become a pilot.

Six months after his retirement, his record of unblemished service was destroyed when he killed an uninvited guest who started an argument at a New Year's Eve party in the Rueger home.

The career Naval officer was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. He began his prison term at the Virginia State Penitentiary in Richmond on 31 Aug. 1956.

In October, VAdm. James L. Holloway, Chief of Naval Personnel, notified Commander Rueger that the Navy was preparing to ask President Eisenhower to drop the convicted officer from the re-

General Taylor on Army, JCS, Pay

The Army Chief of Staff, speaking before the National Press Club 19 December, declared that no single Service "has any special claim on the Milky Way," as was reported in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL. General Taylor, in response to questions from newsmen, had comments on 99.44% unanimity in the Joint Chiefs, and on the urgent need for enactment of the Cordiner Plan—Page 11. There's also the text of major portions of the General's important address.

NATO Special Weapons Course

Last week's NATO meetings in Paris have heightened interest in what is being done to train commanders of U. S. and Allied forces in Europe in the theory of atomic weapons employment. Such a course is conducted at a specialized U. S. Army School at Oberammergau, Germany—Page 28. There's a story on Page 3 concerning another specialized school at Ft. Buchanan, C. Z.

IT'S D-WEEK FOR PAY RAISE BILL!

The Department of Defense and the Bureau of the Budget were nearing a final decision on the military pay raise bill as THE JOURNAL went to press. As a consequence administration officials put the wraps on disclosure of full details, particularly the final price tag.

Best estimates are that the pay bill under consideration will cost about $408,000,000, if the decision remains final to eliminate a six percent minimum cost of living increase for everyone on active duty with more than two years service and to deny any benefits to retired persons. Inclusion of these two proposals, to which the Bureau of the Budget has been cool, would increase the cost to approximately $560,000,000.

As reported in recent issues of THE JOURNAL, the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee missile hearings gave Service chiefs a prime platform for urging the adoption of a new pay structure.

Consensus among the Senators was that action to redesign military pay scales is essential.

There are reports that the House Armed Services Committee may tackle pay legislation before pending hearings in the Senate headed by Senator John Stennis (D-Miss) are completed.

Anti-Satellite Missile And Air-Launched IRBM Proposed By AF Research Chief

The Air Force Deputy Chief of Staff for Research and Development has proposed a missile which will occupy an even higher place in the missile hierarchy than the projected anti-missile missile.

Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt told the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee that the United States "must start work" on an "anti-satellite missile." He said this field is one which the nation "must not overlook."

At the same time, the R&D chief said we should take steps to develop intermediate range ballistic missiles "with an air-launched capability."

In other testimony, General Putt agreed that the Russians have demonstrated ability to fire an intercontinental ballistic missile with sufficient power to reach the United States. He said, "There would still be some doubt as to the degree of accuracy that such a missile would have, but they certainly could hit the United States."

He told the committee the U. S. should "proceed posthaste" on the development of both ballistic missiles and satellites and that both should have "top priority."

In addition to work on an anti-satellite missile and an air-launched IRBM, General Putt said the nation should:

- Achieve a significant operational ICBM and IRBM capability "just as quickly as we can."

- Establish a vigorous research and development program "for follow-on in-

Drew, pilot in Operation Fire Wall, both smile happily after Major Drew was presented the Distinguished Flying Cross for setting a new world's speed record. Major Drew, flying a U. S. Air Force F-101A Voodoo, averaged 1207.6 miles per hour in two passes over the 10.1 mile measured straightway course at Edwards AFB, surpassing the previous international mark of 1132.136 miles per hour, held by the British, and the national figure of 1015.428 miles per hour, held by the U. S. Navy.

CHEMICAL BOMBER

A contract for a supersonic intercontinental bomber has been awarded to North American Aviation, Inc., Air Force Secretary James H. Douglas announced 23 December.

The Air Force said:

"The bomber previously referred to as the WS 110A will be capable of speeds in excess of 2,000 miles an hour for long distances at ceilings of over 70,000 feet.

"The approved project is the result of competitive proposals and an exhaustive research program launched in 1955."

tired rolls. The Chief of Naval Personnel told Commander Rueger that if he would submit his resignation, forfeiting all of his benefits, the Navy, in turn, would not ask the President to act in the case.

Commander Rueger declined the Navy's offer, protesting that he had "earned" his retirement and that it could not be legally taken away.

The Navy then took the case to the White House and, in April of this year, President Eisenhower directed that Commander Rueger be dropped from the Navy retired rolls, effective 8 March 1957.

The imprisoned officer was notified of this action in a letter signed by Capt. G. S. Bullen, a member of Admiral Holloway's staff. The official Navy letter did not mention Commander Rueger's pay or benefits.

A notation on the letter states that copies were sent to the Treasurer of the United States, the Comptroller General, the Justice Department, the Veterans Administration and four Navy offices, including the Navy Finance Center which handles Navy pay.

The fate of the latter copy is tied in with the "unknown circumstances," the Navy now relates.

On 27 April 1957, THE JOURNAL published a front-page story detailing these events and, in the same issue, protested editorially that retired pay is "earned pay" which the Government should not take away in such cases.

On Capitol Hill, the House and Senate concurrently passed a law affecting pensioned veterans. The accompanying report in both Houses of Congress stated unequivocally that to deprive a man of his retirement pay because of imprisonment is to impose "an additional penalty."

The first, and subsequent JOURNAL articles, touched off a prolonged controversy over the Rueger case. Here are some of the actions which followed:

- The House Armed Services Committee questioned the decision, pointing out that "it has been the consistent position of the military departments, which position has been endorsed by the Congress, that retired pay in the military services is earned retirement and not a gratuity."

- A number of metropolitan newspapers and the United Press publicized the story.

- A number of Congressmen protested the action.

- Admiral Holloway advised the House Armed Services Committee that he, personally, believes military families should be assured that retired pay will never be eliminated as a result of "circumstances which may often be entirely outside the knowledge and beyond the control of the retired person's wife and children." But, he said, current law gives no alternative to such action.

(Editor's Note: The law is permissive, not mandatory. It states that the President "may" take such action.)

Official Navy Letter Tells Of Pay Mistake

Here is the full text of RAdm. W. G. Cooper's letter detailing the "unknown circumstances" which resulted in the costly pay error:

Office of The Comptroller
9 December 1957

Mr. Anthony C. Gaudio
Probation and Parole Officer
Virginia Parole District Number 10
2525 Wilson Blvd., Second Floor
Arlington 1, Virginia

Dear Sir:

Your letter of November 22, 1957 to the Commanding Officer of the U. S. Navy Finance Center, regarding former Cdr. Robert B. Rueger, U. S. Navy, 108371, has been referred to this office for reply.

On March 8, 1957, the President of the United States directed that Mr. Rueger be dropped from the rolls of the Navy in accordance with Sec. 1161, Title 10, P.L. 1028, 84th Congress. The Chief of Naval Personnel communicated this information to Mr. Rueger on April 11, 1957.

The dropping of a retired officer from the rolls of the Navy automatically brings about a stoppage of his entitlement to retired pay. The retired pay rolls for all Naval personnel are carried at the Navy Finance Center, Cleveland, Ohio. Normally, the Navy Finance Center would have been notified of the fact that Mr. Rueger had been dropped from the rolls and they would have stopped his pay as of March 8, 1957. However, due to unknown circumstances, the Navy Finance Center failed to receive copies of the Bureau of Naval Personnel notification to Mr. Rueger. Since they were unaware of the fact that Mr. Rueger had been dropped from the rolls they continued to make disbursements to him until notified by this office on Nov. 26 that he was no longer entitled to pay. The first indication that the Navy Department had that Mr. Rueger was still in receipt of retired pay came about as a result of your telephone call to the Office of the Judge Advocate General. At the present time Mr. Rueger is indebted to the Government in the amount of $3,777.16. An attempt will be made by the Navy Finance Center to collect this money from Mr. Rueger as soon as possible.

I trust that this is the information that you desire.

Sincerely yours,

W. G. Cooper
Rear Adm., USN
Deputy Comptroller

continued to publish developments in the case.

- The Ruegers' Congressman, Representative Joel T. Broyhill (R-Va) protested the Navy's "police state" tactics, requested the Secretary of the Navy to reverse the ruling and, finally, made a direct, but unsuccessful appeal to the President.

- Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the

FOR MERITORIOUS SERVICE and outstanding performance of duty as Chief, Personnel Services Branch, Adjutant General's Section, Seventh US Army, Capt. Robert I. Turner, right, is awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant. Presentation was made at Seventh Army Headquarters in Valhingen, Germany, by Col. H. H. Newman, Seventh Army AG, left.

House Armed Services Committee referred the case to a subcommittee and directed a full investigation. The powerful House member said he questioned "the fairness of any decision which drops a retired officer from the rolls and deprives not only him but his dependents of any further retirement benefits."

- In a closed-door meeting, the subcommittee, headed by Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex), called upon three top Navy officials, including the Secretary of the Navy, to explain the action. Although the Navy had recommended the disenrollment of Commander Rueger, Secretary Thomas S. Gates later placed the responsibility squarely on the President's shoulders. He said since the President had seen fit to exercise his authority in the matter, "I have no power or authority to overrule that action." Chairman Kilday said his subcommittee would have to make a thorough study of all such cases before pursuing the matter further.

- A White House assistant replied to Congressman Broyhill's plea that retired pay "should be inviolable." He said there is no way to restore such pay administratively, and he "regretted" that Commander Rueger "cannot be given any assistance."

- In a letter to Congressman Broyhill, Secretary Gates said, "There is always the possibility, of course, that relief might be afforded to the Rueger family through legislative action." He said the "unfortunate situation" might be affected by the Kilday subcommittee study "or by any action the full committee may take on the basis of such a study."

While these developments were taking place, Commander Rueger continued to receive his monthly retirement checks which he endorsed and passed on to Mrs. Rueger to pay the family bills.

About a month before Commander Rueger was to be paroled, his parole officer, Mr. Anthony C. Gaudio, wrote to the Commanding Officer of the Navy Finance Center and called the office of the Navy Judge Advocate General to inquire about the checks which Commander Rueger continued to receive.

Two and one-half weeks later, Mr. Gaudio received a reply from the Navy Deputy Comptroller, RAdm. W. G. Cooper, who said the first indication the Navy had that Commander Rueger was still receiving his pay "came about as a result of your telephone call."

Admiral Cooper informed the parole officer that the Commander owes the Government $3,777.16 which the Navy Finance Center will attempt to collect "as soon as possible."

Admiral Cooper said the Navy Finance Center, "due to unknown circumstances" had failed to receive copies of the Bureau of Personnel action in the case, and had continued to send Commander Rueger's checks "until notified by this office on 26 November that he was no longer entitled to pay."

The letter from Admiral Cooper, dated 9 December, was mailed to Mr. Gaudio who, in turn, gave Commander Rueger a copy on 19 December when the career Naval officer was being paroled, after serving 16 months' of his five-year term.

Journal Cited In Job Placements

THE U. S. Employment Service reports a large increase in job placement activities as a result of THE JOURNAL's reports on that organization's program to place "rified" and retired military officers.

Within a month after the publication of the first story, the USES says in a memorandum, the number of new registrants increased by 66 per cent. Aid in preparing job resumes during this period increased 300 per cent over the previous month.

"The number of mail inquiries coming into the local office in response to ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL publicity," the memorandum states, "were evenly divided between Army-Navy officers. They ranged in rank from CWO through Major General (Army) and Lt. (j.g.) through Captain (Navy)."

"Men in the Air Force ranged in rank from Lieutenant through Colonel and they accounted for the next largest group."

"Men in the Marine Corps represented Lieutenant through Colonel. There was also a Medical Service Corps officer and a U. S. Public Health Service officer..."

"The letters came from men all over the world," the memorandum said.

The USES memorandum went on to discuss "Employer Interest as Result of Publicity." Among other facts, it noted that the "Deputy Director of Federal Civil Defense came in and screened the retired officer file."

"An official representing a public school district in South Carolina (also a retired officer), accepted 11 resumes and later came up to Washington and with the assistance of the placement specialist, accepted additional resumes. The president of a bank in Mountain View, Missouri, wrote in to suggest that the need for a lawyer, veterinarian and dentist was great in their town."

The figures noted in the memorandum applied only to the USES Washington office. No figures have been received from USES' 78 metropolitan organizations.

Do's And Don'ts On Oversea Adoption

THE JOURNAL will mark the holiday season by publication in next week's issue of a comprehensive report on procedures for adoption of children by Service families overseas.

Hundreds of military families have adopted children in all parts of the world. Their experiences and particularly the problems that have been encountered and how they can be avoided will be told in next week's article.

Rep. Price Continues On Service Committee

Representative Mel Price (D-Ill.), who begins his 14th year in the U. S. Congress on 6 January, will continue to serve on the House Armed Services Committee in the second session of the 85th Congress. His name inadvertently was omitted from the list of Committee members published in THE JOURNAL on 21 December.

Congressman Price, who will be 53 on 1 January, has served on the House Armed Services Committee since 1947. Prior to that, he was a member of the old House Military Affairs Committee. He currently is the Vice Chairman of the Subcommittee which is responsible for Reserve and National Guard matters, and various personnel legislation.

Key Scientists View Pentagon's R&D Problems; Recommend Corrective Steps

What do scientists think of the Pentagon's missile and satellite programs and other research and development efforts within the Defense Department?

Here are some of the views expressed by Dr. J. A. Van Allen, Head of the Department of Physics at Iowa State University; Dr. Ernst Stuhlinger, Director of Research at the Army Ballistics Missile Agency; and Dr. Homer E. Newell, jr., Superintendent of Atmospheric Astrophysics at the U. S. Naval Research Laboratory, in replies to questions posed by the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee:

Cites Painful Division

Doctor Van Allen—The U. S. has adequate scientific, engineering and technical manpower in the missile and satellite field, but the administrative handling of this vast technology, which could be applied to agreed national objectives, has been painfully divisive and painfully lacking in clear, unified objectives. Not enough effort has been concentrated on primary needs.

The Defense Department action in turning down an Army proposal to use the Jupiter C system to launch a satellite, and the subsequent decision to have the Navy undertake the development of a complex, new vehicle (the Vanguard) was thoroughly ill-advised.

The U. S. has an urgent need for the genuine unification of its missile and satellite efforts in a civilian commission having the general character of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Charges Too Much Secrecy

Doctor Stuhlinger—The U. S. will continue to be poorly prepared for missile, satellite, and space vehicle development projects unless the existing manpower for supporting research is utilized to a greater extent.

Organizations like the Army Ballistic Missile Agency should be given a permanent research assignment to "advance the state of the art," without further specifications, but with a fixed and substantial amount of funding which is available regularly year after year. The Army could have launched a satellite in the fall of 1956 and the fact that the Army proposal to do this was not accepted until very recently shows that existing scientific manpower was not used properly.

Both the Thor and Jupiter projects should have been pushed forward instead of living for a year under the threat that one would be discontinued. There has been too much secrecy at the wrong places. Scientific missile and space projects should not be separated from military projects.

Above all, it should be realized that research and development teams are the most valuable asset a country can have on its defense account. Full utilization of all of them according to a well-conceived master plan will not only be the wisest, but, in the long run, also the cheapest approach to our defense problem.

Doctor Newell—A strong basic research program is essential to continuing vitality of applied research and development in missiles or any other military or peacetime applications. There has not been adequate effort in rocket sounding of the upper atmosphere.

Many important scientific problems have lain dormant because of lack of money and personnel to attack them. The national effort has been about 50 percent of what it should have been. Basic research in the Department of Defense suffers by being swallowed up in and made subservient to applied research and development programs. It suffers in competing with such programs for money, personnel, facilities and support in general.

What is needed is a permanent, competent and adequate staff of scientists at the DOD level to provide leadership in basic and applied research. Not detailed direction, but the actual doing of high quality, imaginative, comprehensive and dynamic research. A purely coordinative office that is not involved in the doing will not be effective.

The U. S. position in the field of space research would be greatly strengthened by the creation of a National Space Establishment. The present rocket sounding program should be strengthened and put on a sound financial basis. Salaries of scientists should be raised.

The military have strayed too far from their primary job of defense in which they are a user of research and research products, and are attempting to prescribe the research that is to be done and even to direct the research itself. On both counts the military are incompetent to do the job. However, there must be close liaison and cooperation between the scientists and the military.

The Lopsided Structure Of The 5-sided House

Next week's issue of "The Journal," on the eve of a new Congress that is certain to give stress to the organization of the Defense Department will explore the problems of administration and responsibility at the Pentagon.

Recent Congressional hearings—and more will come in '58—have focused on the confusion in the missile program.

In a large sense, the missile situation is comparable to difficulties in other areas. For example:

1. Why has there been such a fuss at the Pentagon between the Defense Department and the Services on achieving what is an unanimously desired objective? Everyone agrees there is an urgent need for more family housing, but there is sharp disagreement on how to obtain it.

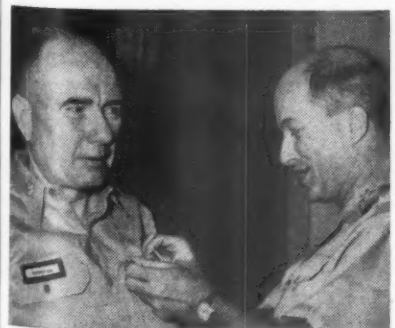

2. Military commanders at all echelons in all the Services have insisted that action should be taken to remedy deficiencies in administration of discipline, but the Defense Department and the Services can't get together on how to solve the problem.

3. Why can't a Senator who asks questions of the Pentagon in July get his answers before December?

4. How is it possible for nine Assistant Secretaries of Defense, the so-called Pentagon "vice presidents," to get their jobs done under a setup where they are sometimes line "executives" with obvious operational responsibilities and at other times are described as staff men serving only in an advisory and policy position?

5. What about the widely heralded Single Manager system? Is it working?

These and other problems will be surveyed in a special article prepared by members of "The Journal" staff covering all the Services and Capitol Hill.

COL. MORRIS G. MILLER (right), Chief Joint Services Support Division of the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Vietnam, awards the Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant to Maj. Olin C. Harrison for meritorious service 1953 to 1957 as Chief of Editorial Division, Nonresident Instruction Department, U. S. Army Armor School.

Industry Leaders Cite Needed Changes In Research And Development Programs

What are industry's views about the current missile-satellite hassle?

Answers to this question have been supplied to the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee by Dr. Simon Ramo of the Ramo-Wooldridge Corp., Los Angeles, Calif.; Mr. W. C. Tinus, Vice President of Bell Telephone Laboratories, Whippany, N. J.; Mr. S. C. Donnelly, Assistant Works Manager of the Western Electric Co., Burlington, N. C., and Mr. James R. Dempsy, manager of the Atlas program for Convair.

Here are some of the things these top industrialists told the subcommittee:

DOCTOR RAMO—The missile and satellite programs have not used scientific and engineering talent to the fullest to "sell," justify or defend the nontechnical aspects which would insure full appreciation, maximum sponsorship and continuation of the programs.

A complete governmental reorganization of projects already well along would be dangerous, but for all follow-on projects, including improved ballistic missiles and a variety of satellites and other space weapons systems, faster progress will be possible only if:

- (1) very major changes are made in the Defense Department organization to eliminate interservice rivalry,
- (2) separate funding is provided for these major programs,
- (3) new procurement and R&D policies are instituted that will permit large gambles,
- (4) relatively huge expenditures are committed for basic research and education.

For already existing ballistic missile projects that are nearing completion in the next year or two, there should be a 10-20 per cent increase in funds and a smoothing out of all organizational problems. For the follow-on projects expenditures should be doubled. For basic research and education, there should be a ten-fold increase.

MESSRS. TINUS AND DONNELLY (joint letter)—There is need for more concentration of responsibility and authority so as to reverse the present trend toward increasing numbers of government officials who must be informed before decisions can be reached.

Once it is decided to proceed with a particular project, a single individual backed by a competent organization should have responsibility and authority to carry out the development and production of the weapon system as a whole. His responsibility should carry through until the system is in effective operational use. Use of overtime should be at the contractor's discretion. Longer term authorizations are desirable. Paper work should be reduced.

MR. DEMPSY—A greater sense of urgency should be engendered in the minds of everyone in Government and industry. There should be more general dissemination of information about what the Russians are doing, more technical intelligence about their approaches and progress. There should be a greater interchange of information among Service offices, and the "need to know" requirement should be eliminated. The cautious approach has had a delaying effect. There is a need for special test facilities and for elimination of the cumbersome processes by which such facilities are made available to industry by the Government.

The U. S. Army Training Center, Caribbean, at Ft. Buchanan, Puerto Rico, the only Army Training Center of its kind in the world for American citizen-soldiers, has the primary mission of teaching conversational English to Puerto Rican inductees in order to prepare them for world wide Army assignment.

Local Spanish-speaking trainees are required to undergo 8 weeks of English instruction at the Center upon entering the Army before attending basic military training in the U. S.

The English training system used at the Training Center is similar to that employed so successfully with other languages at the Army's Language School at Monterey, Calif.

The classes are conducted by qualified soldier-instructors from various regions of the United States. All instructors are college trained, and many possess a master's or a doctor's degree plus fluency in Spanish. Classes are held five hours a day, Monday through Friday, and the attendance is held to a maximum of 15 trainees in order to facilitate the learning process. Instruction in English is alternated with basic military subjects in the USATCC training program.

Since many of the instructors are bilingual in Spanish, it is not unusual for a USATCC visitor to hear an instructor change rapidly from English to Spanish while explaining a certain word or phrase to the class. Visual aids are widely used in language instruction.

At present there are more than 900 trainees at the USATCC, which is under the command of Lt. Col. Sam E. Clegg.

An American citizen by birth, the Puerto Rican soldier has served with distinction during two world wars and the Korean conflict. He saw combat in Europe with the Island's 65th Infantry Regiment while attached to the Third U. S. Army. Later in Korea, the Puerto Rican soldier fought bravely against the enemy at several points along the Korean battlefield.

In 1956, there were over 9,000 Puerto Ricans serving in the U. S. Armed Forces.

Army Gives Contract For Surveillance

A contract for development of combat surveillance methods has been given by the Army to the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, Buffalo, N. Y.

Purpose of the contract, awarded by the Signal Corps, is to improve systems of surveillance of a battlefield by radar, infrared, sonic, meteorological, drone reconnaissance, photographic, and televisual means.

The study of combat surveillance being undertaken by the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory is a three-fold task: (1) to evaluate all major programs of combat surveillance within the Department of the Army, (2) to review tactics and techniques in relation to existing and future combat surveillance programs, and (3) to recommend new policies and practices to the U. S. Army Combat Surveillance Agency.

Key personnel involved in the study include 35 scientists and engineers from Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory and about 35 military personnel of the Army Combat Surveillance Agency.

The Office for the study will be located in the Washington, D. C. area.

WHAT IS SPACE?

Some 500 miles above the earth, a few solitary molecules of atmosphere are the final "land's end" of our small island in space—the outer reef beyond which lies an immense cosmic ocean so inconceivable that men had to invent a symbol (∞) to denote it.

How vast is this ocean, and what lies beyond our shores?

First, our own sea of stars: This is a giant wheel-shaped galaxy containing some 300 billion stars. Imagine a speck the size of a dust particle on the spoke of a cosmic carriage wheel 1,000 miles in diameter. This is the relative size of our sun, one small life-giving star in the great procession. And beyond our galaxy, at least 100 million more such galactic systems are telescopically visible. The "weather" of this cosmic ocean is composed of strange storms of cosmic radiation, distant clouds of interstellar gas, violent geomagnetic tides and currents, sudden showers of meteoric dust.

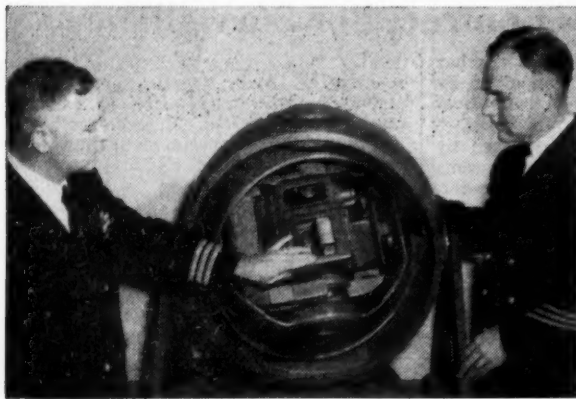

It is this weather that we first seek to understand. Much needs to be learned about cosmic rays, the nature of gravity, the physics of light, the true chemistry of "nothingness," the temperature of space, and the movements of the atmosphere on our small island below.

Our first few hundred miles voyage into space will be an infinitesimal step into the 600 billion billion miles of the visible eternity surrounding us.

Navy May Follow Army, Air Force And Authorize Operation Of Aero Clubs

Major Navy commands soon may be given authority to establish Aero Clubs for officers and men, their families, and civilian employees.

The Clubs would be set up "in the interest of recreation and morale" and give those interested an opportunity to take up flying as a social activity.

One Club already exists at the Naval Station Bermuda. It was established by constitution and is operated by regulations formulated by the Station's Commanding Officer. The club is on a self-sustaining basis. Dues and flying fees support the organization.

The Navy's Special Services Division has been approached by members of other commands. Those interested in having a Club organized at their command are advised by Special Services to drop a line to the Chief of Naval Personnel (Attn: Pers Gla), Navy Department, Washington 25, D. C.

Army and Air Force commands have operated Aero Clubs for some time.

"SPACE OBSERVATORY"

The Navy has plans in the mill to launch an earth satellite observatory.

Adm. Rawson Bennett, Chief of Naval Research, made this revelation 12 December in a speech to the Ft. Wayne, Ind., Chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

He said that "in a few years" the Navy would send up balloon-borne telescopes attached to television cameras which will be operated from the ground. "The scientists in the project," he said, "regard the balloon-borne telescope as a stepping-stone to the satellite observatory, which will have an even larger telescope attached to the TV camera."

FLYTAF Instructors Will Fly With SAC

Beginning this January, Flying Training Air Force instructors will participate in Strategic Air Command overseas deployment exercises.

The volunteers will be handpicked by wing-commanders at basic pilot and navigator bases. All will be career officers in the grade of Captain or below.

Participation in the SAC exercises will be on a TDY basis for 37 days. During this time the FLYTAF personnel will be required to submit weekly reports on their activities for publication in their base newspaper.

Capt. Hitchens Heads Video

Capt. Howard B. Hitchens, jr., has reported to the U. S. Air Force Academy where he will be head of the television branch of the audio-visual instruction division.

Captain Hitchens, rated an aircraft navigator, has been assigned to Mather AFB, Calif., for the past four years. He has been officer-in-charge of Mather's Pre-Non-Commissioned Officer Leadership school.

Prior to his assignment to Mather, Hitchens had been a prisoner-of-war during the Korean action.

Captain and Mrs. Hitchens and their three children will live in Denver, Colorado near the temporary location of the Air Force Academy.

ATC Weapons School Will Shift To TAC

The Air Force Fighter Weapons School, Nellis AFB, Nev., will be transferred 1 February 1958 from the Air Training Command to the Tactical Air Command.

All present personnel and equipment of the school will be maintained, but will be transferred to TAC.

The Fighter Weapons School is actually two schools: Conventional Gunnery and Nuclear Weapons, and Research and Development.

The change in command will afford TAC the opportunity to maintain control over the combat procedures presently taught fighter pilots, as well as the latest developments in nuclear and conventional weapons delivery.

Nellis is one of the USAF's advanced gunnery training bases.

Thirty-one officers and 377 airmen of the 3525th Combat Crew Training Squadron (Nuclear) are affected in the transfer.

AF Shifts Studies For Air Defense

Provision of $20 million worth of technical services for the Air Defense Command will be transferred from the Rand Corporation to the newly-formed System Development Corporation of Santa Monica, Calif.

The new, non-profit corporation was formed from Rand's System Development Division and will absorb the Division's personnel.

Organization of the new corporation was decided upon after it became apparent that specialized service activities were increasingly outside the scope of Rand's primary long-range research function.

Two major projects on which the Systems Development Corporation will work are the installation and maintenance of a System Training Program for the air defense system, and a "programming" of computers for SAGE Air Defense, soon to be activated throughout the United States.

F. R. Collbohm, President of Rand, will serve as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the new corporation. Corporation president is M. O. Kappler.

Admitted To Supreme Court

Three lawyers serving in the Staff Judge Advocate office of the Central Air Defense Force, Richards-Gebaur AFB, Mo., have been admitted to practice before the U. S. Supreme Court, U. S. Court of Military Appeals and the U. S. Court of Claims.

They are Maj. William Karr, Director of Military Justice; Maj. Charles K. Rush, Director of Civil Law; and Capt. John W. Cooper, Director of Legal Assistance.

FIRE PREVENTION PLAQUE. Lt. Col. Garland J. Smith, commander of the 93d Periodic Maintenance Squadron, takes permanent possession of the coveted fire prevention plaque at Castle AFB, Calif. Base Fire Chief John C. Menea presents the plaque. Periodic Maintenance won permanent possession of the plaque after topping all other Castle squadrons five times and tying for first place twice between April 1956 and October 1957.

More Planes Loaned For Z. I. Aero Clubs

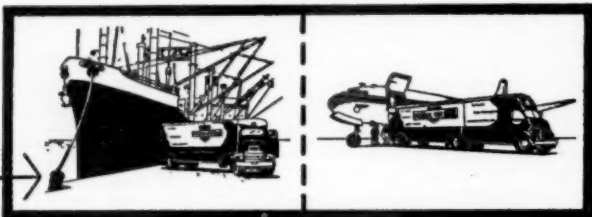

The Air Force allocated 52 more single engine two-place Beechcraft T-34 Mentor training planes to major air commands in the Z. I. for loan to Aero Clubs.

Earlier in 1957 the Air Force loaned 172 of the trainers to its Aero Clubs.

SAC will get 28, ADC gets 16, AMC gets three, and ATC, ARDC, AU, AF, ACAD and TAC will each receive one of the T-34's. MATS, ConAC and HedCom said they didn't want an allocation.

Orange Men Serve With The AF Blue

Orange men have invaded the Air Force.

They are now at the North American Air Defense Command, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The men are rated officers in the Command's Flight Safety Headquarters, and the Personnel Equipment Chief in supply, all testing new flight suits of international orange.

Col. G. W. Orr, Assistant to the Commander for Safety, said the flashy but conventionally styled flight suits were authorized by Maj. Gen. T. A. Bennett, ADC Deputy for Materiel, to determine wearability and dirt tolerance. Both summer and winter weights in the orange have been provided by the manufacturers of the regular Air Force green flying suits.

The orange color is said to be a great asset in rescue and safety operations, as well as a boost to flyers' morale. Similar suits are now being worn by the jet flyers at Kinross AFB, Mich., on an unofficial basis.

The Academy wound up its first season of major football competition with a record of three won, six lost and one tied.

According to Head Coach Buck Shaw, "We felt the season would be pretty much like this. Actually the only bad game we played was against Utah, although we could have won several of those that we lost."

Here is the AFA's 1958 football schedule:

27 Sept.—at Detroit U.
 4 Oct.—at Iowa U.
 11 Oct.—Colorado State U.
 18 Oct.—at Stanford
 25 Oct.—Utah
 1 Nov.—open date
 8 Nov.—Denver U.
 15 Nov.—Wyoming
 22 Nov.—at New Mexico
 29 Nov.—at Colorado U.

Cordiner and the Chiefs. There are welcome indications that the Service Chiefs intend to take advantage of every opportunity to impress upon the Nation the need for Congressional action on the Cordiner Report. This was evidenced during the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee hearings on the missile program (THE JOURNAL 21 December) and in the appearance of General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff of the Army, before the National Press Club (page 11).

General Taylor was asked to comment on the promotion problem in the Army. He said it took him 13 years to make captain, remarking that this was a fast pace compared to General Gruenther's class (USMA '18) which took 17 years to make captain. The general said it was important that there be a satisfactory rate of promotions, but suggested there were more important morale problems.

General Taylor stressed the primary need for adoption of the Cordiner Report. He added that assignment stability and lack of adequate housing are other vital morale considerations.

Between now and the time Congress begins hearings on the pay measure, the Service Secretaries and the Joint Chiefs will have numerous occasions on which it would be proper for them to discuss the pay situation. It is to be hoped that the Service leaders, as was done by Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas and General Thomas D. White, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, during the Senate hearings, will have the courage, despite Bureau of the Budget opposition, to tell why the pay benefits should include those on the retired lists.

The President's public support for pay changes has cleared the way for Pentagon officials to document the case whenever they can.

Compounding An Injury. The Navy Department's Christmas letter to former Cdr. Robert B. Rueger demanding that he return the $3,777.16 it had erroneously paid to him cruelly compounds the injury the Department inflicted upon this officer and his family when it ordered him dropped from the retired list.

The details of this case, originally brought to light in THE JOURNAL, have been aired in the daily press and in Congress. Official testimony showed that after a faithful and honorable active career of nearly 30 years in the Navy, this retired officer was sent to jail on a manslaughter charge growing out of the shooting of an uninvited guest at a New Year's party in his home. Upon the Navy's recommendation, the President ordered that he be dropped from the retired list. THE JOURNAL, his Congressman, the House Armed Services Committee, and the daily press protested that this action not only deprived an officer of an income he had earned by an honorable career but inflicted punishment upon his wife and children. But the Navy was adamant, blamed the final action upon the President, and said it was too late to rescind it.

In the meantime, the Navy's right hand did not know what its left was doing. The Navy Finance Center failed to receive word of the Bureau of Personnel's notification to Rueger that he had been dropped, so that his pay checks continued to be sent. Now that he is out of jail the Department discovers its error and demands return of the money upon which his family lived while he was paying his debt to society.

We predict that the reaction in Congress and the public will prevent this untimely decree from being carried out.

How Great the Crisis? Now that the highlights of the Gaither Report assessing our defense posture have been leaked to the press, the Administration owes it to the American people to give them an official summation of its findings of fact and its recommendations.

So gloomy and foreboding are the "leaked" conclusions of this top level study that the public must be shocked and confused as to how we stand vis-a-vis the communist world. If the Gaither Committee, as some Administration leaders contend, became overly alarmed (even before the Sputnik launchings) the Administration must give its evaluation of the Report. But the public must not be left believing its leaders are concealing vital facts bearing on the future and what must be done to avert national disaster.

The Report, press stories have said, makes di-

Retired "Pay"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I read with concerned interest your column titled: "Budget Bureau Axes Retired Pay" in your 7 December issue. I am concerned because a high government agency such as the Bureau of the Budget, upon whom we the people rely for important decisions and/or concurrence on fiscal matters, does not in my humble opinion (I hope I am mistaken) have a full understanding of retired pay.

In the interest of clarification for all concerned, retired pay is not a pension as the Bureau of the Budget chooses to treat it, because it does not carry any of the privileges of a pension. It stops the day following death. It stops the day following a conviction for a felony. It stops the day that the military status of the individual is terminated. Full income taxes must be paid, etc., etc. Therefore, it follows that retired personnel are not on pension. They maintain a military status. They must maintain suitable, serviceable uniforms. They must and most all do keep themselves in the best physical and professional condition so that they can again serve their country actively when called upon to do so. In other words, the retired individual remains a soldier. He is on the payroll of the Army, Navy or Air Force and when the pay is increased it should apply to all listed on the payrolls. Any other method, such as the Bureau of the Budget proposes, is discriminatory against a segment of the Armed Services population.

In order to assure an active Army, Navy or Air Force of high quality to defend our great country, we must have and keep our retired service personnel satisfied and happy in that the country they have served, not for pay and privileges, but for the love of service, has kept the faith. This beacon of satisfaction to a retired serviceman is the only ray of light that leads men to a service carect recommendations in the vital areas of military and civil defense; it suggests reorganization of the Department of Defense and redefinition of Service roles and missions. Congress, and particularly the Armed Services Committee, will insist upon having these for study.

The Administration probably hesitated to add news of the Report to the beeping of the Sputniks. It is likely also that it did not want to complicate further the Paris NATO meetings by new revelations of gloom. The Report, however, appears to have had the effect of strengthening President Eisenhower's Oklahoma City chin-up speech over his first one. The Report, plus Sputnik, must also have had a bearing on the decision to ask Congress for a $1-billion supplemental appropriation for defense.

Undoubtedly the Report, having been made for the information of the President and the National Security Council, contains details and sections which cannot be made public without revealing highly secret information. Nevertheless, in light of the current situation, the Administration must make public as much of its text as possible and at the same time tell the people what it intends to do about it.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (27 Dec. 1947)—In Japan it is the Communist-led Congress of Industrial Organization Unions which is organizing obstruction of recovery. The Communists have held a series of meetings directed against coal production and have circulated "confidential" instructions to coal miners on how to slow down and stop altogether production of the fuel which is gravely needed for industrial recovery. These dodges are being resorted to because plain strikes for political reasons have been forbidden by General MacArthur; the Communist belief was that the equivalent of strikes could be conducted without detection and punishment.

50 Years Ago (28 Dec. 1907)—It is an auspicious circumstance that the first bill to pass the Philippine Assembly—and it was passed on 20 Dec. without a dissenting vote—is a measure appropriating $1,000,000 for the building of public school houses throughout the islands.

90 Years Ago (28 Dec. 1867)—If the soldier were paid more often than once every two months, he would always have a little money, if ever so little, in his pocket. He could then buy to his advantage, according to the scale of prices which free supply and demand creates, rather than to submit to the hard bargains driven with him now. He now has to pay enormous advances in price for the reason that he buys on credit.

reer. Remember we could never begin to pay a soldier for his work because, who can fix the daily salary of a man on the battlefield, and let's not forget the overtime and double-time for Sundays and holidays.

School Aid Overseas

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your recent stories have raised hopes here in Germany that more will be done to aid the education of thousands of Service children. Let's hope the reports prove correct.

It will certainly be a blow if with all this talk about improving schools nothing is done to improve the finances for overseas schools operated by the Services.

If Congress cuts the funds again, I suggest the Services apply to the Ford Foundation or some other organization for help.

MAJOR, USA

General Taylor Says "Milky Way" Should Be Open To All The Armed Services; He Calls For National Weapons Arsenal From Which Each Could Draw Arms

SPEAKING to a packed audience at the National Press Club on 19 December, General Maxwell D. Taylor said that all the Army wanted for Christmas was "a new, modern and enlarged crystal ball to assist us all in anticipating the military problems of this year, next year, and of many years to come."

He said such a weapon—the first Crystalballnik—would be "the ultimate weapon." In these columns, THE JOURNAL publishes major excerpts from the general's address.

During a question-answer session, which followed the speech, General Taylor was asked to comment on a plan advanced by Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin (THE JOURNAL 21 December) to scrap the present JCS structure.

General Taylor said he felt that what was necessary was for a group of top officials to sit down and decide what is wrong with the present JCS organization, and then decide what to do about it. At such time, he suggested General Gavin's plan should be considered.

The Chief of Staff went on to say that while great attention is given to disagreements among the Chiefs, the facts are that from 15 December 1956 to 15 December 1957, the JCS had only three split papers on 705 decisions—something like 99.44% agreement, he suggested.

General Taylor conceded that the split papers were on major matters.

He said when he first came to the post of Army Chief, he largely favored the longtime Army position, taken during the first Unification talks, that there should be a single Chief. He said he was not nearly so sure of this now.

In his prepared address, the General said:

"The more we reflect upon the consequences of a general atomic war, the more it seems unlikely that any nation will deliberately embark upon such a course of action. Even in the age of barbarism, war was never waged as an end in itself. Rightly or wrongly, at least one of the participants thought that war would produce results ultimately advantageous to his cause. As long as general atomic war is clearly suicidal to all participants, it is hard to believe that either side will see an advantage in mutual destruction. Thus, general atomic war ceases to be war in the historical sense and is rather a meaningless thing, utterly incompatible with the objectives of thinking beings. Since to fight such a war is, in fact, to lose it, the task of national defense becomes one of deterring, rather than fighting such a war.

Soviet Enterprises

But if we succeed in deterring the Big War are we then secure? By the fact of deterring it are we prepared to meet all other situations which may require a military response? It is a fact of history that we have succeeded in deterring general atomic war since the advent of atomic weapons, but on the other hand we have not succeeded in preventing Communist expansion. This expansion has been accomplished through military actions short of general war, in eight of which the Soviets or their Communist allies have been participants. The Soviet Union has been willing to engage in these dangerous enterprises in spite of our superiority in the field of atomic weapons during this period.

These facts lead me to feel that in addition to continuing to deter general atomic war, we must make adequate provision for deterring or winning quickly any challenge short of general war. Otherwise, we risk the slow attrition of our cause or perhaps the unplanned and undesired expansion of a local hostility into that great general war which we are trying to avoid.

Crystal Ball's Help

Our new crystal ball would help us in dealing with a related question; namely, the possibility of using tactical atomic weapons without their use increasing the danger of general atomic war. I am aware that there are serious and respected students of the matter who are highly dubious about our ability to use tactical atomic weapons without prohibitive risk. Of late, their position has received unexpected support from the Soviet leaders themselves who, as a part of their post-Sputnik propaganda, are endeavoring to persuade the world that it is impossible to use atomic weapons at all without ending in a general atomic war. It would appear that their hope from this tactic is to terrify the Western World into passivity so that they can pursue their plans for aggression without danger of challenge in local areas.

It has not passed unnoticed, however, that Soviet ground forces are extensively equipped with tactical atomic weapons. The equipment display in the 7th of November Moscow parade included numerous such weapons, one at least a tactical Army missile of greater range than any presently operational in the United States Army. Again, in the absence of contrary advice from the soaring ball, the Army intends to move forward aggressively in the atomic missile field, considering that we must have a capability to fight either atomic or non-atomic battles. As long as the potential enemy has these weapons and may use them, we must be ready to enter battle equipped, organized, and trained to use tactical atomic weapons in conjunction with our conventional means.

Middle Course Planned

Another bit of guidance which would be most helpful relates to the possible duration of future conflicts and to the need for the accumulation of reserves of men and of materiel to support extended military operations. One school of thought is inclined to emphasize the probable shortness of future warfare and to insist upon the absolute priority of forces in being. Another will concede the possibility of this shortened form of warfare but still considers it imprudent to go into a fight to the finish prepared for only the first round. This divergence of opinion is not an academic question because it carries budgetary implications of real importance. Pending receipt of better advice and guided by common sense, we shall continue to try to steer a middle course emphasizing the support of active forces while continuing to recognize the need for America to remain able in an emergency to "pass the ammunition."

The next question upon which we need help is related to the kinds and quantities of forces required for national security. In the past it has not been too difficult for the military planners to agree on the general categories of forces to support our over-all strat-

AF CHIEF'S VIEWS

JOURNAL readers will want to refer to the address given by General Thomas D. White, Air Force Chief of Staff, before the National Press Club 29 November.

General White stressed that "no one can logically advocate the spread of our resources to provide a little bit of everything and not enough of what we need."

The Air Force Chief of Staff said that "missiles, manned aircraft and spacecraft, integrated in the command and control structure of the Air Force, would provide function and system completeness."

In speaking of the need to control air space, General White said: "I want to stress that there is no division, per se, between air and space. Air and space are an indivisible field of operations."

egy. We all recognize the need, in first priority, for those forces which deter war, both general and limited war. I would add to this same priority those forces necessary to win a limited war quickly because of the danger to which I have alluded, that too little and too late may lead to a disastrous expansion of conflict.

We have not had much trouble in the past in determining the specific categories of forces which should be maintained by the three Services singly or in combination as a contribution to the deterrence of war. For example, no one disputes the essentiality of a strong atomic retaliatory force such as that currently represented by the long-range bombers of the Air Force and of the Navy. Progressively, the long-range missiles which we hear so much about will be added to this category of force.

Likewise, it is clear that we must have some form of continental air defense to provide reasonable protection against surprise attack to our retaliatory force and to our centers of population and industry. This defense is presently afforded by a combination of Air Force interceptor aircraft and of Army surface-to-air missiles supplemented by the necessary warning facilities. These defensive forces cannot be considered apart from the atomic retaliatory offensive force since the effectiveness of the two in combination is the true measure of deterrence.

Deployed Forces

A third category of deterrent forces we all agree on is represented by our overseas deployments. The Army's present contribution to this category consists of five divisions in Europe and two divisions in Korea. These units provide an important part of the ground shield essential to prevent a surprise attack on the ground in the important strategic areas in which they stand guard. Furthermore, their presence overseas is an important psychological factor through the visible evidence which they present to friend and foe alike of the readiness of the United States to intervene in case our allies are attacked.

Behind these overseas forces we must retain at home strong, mobile units of all Services prepared for rapid movement to any threatened spot in the world. These forces are necessary either to reinforce current deployments or to move to some new area of military operations. For such movements the Army does not have long-range transportation of its own. It is dependent upon the Air Force for airplanes and upon the Navy for ships to give us this vital strategic mobility. The Army voluntarily accepted this dependence upon our sister Services as a part of the decisions arising from the National Security Act of 1947.

However, the dependence is so critical a one that we must be excused if we are often vocal in stressing our need for support. The Army is passing through a period in which it is becoming numerically smaller. We can compensate to a degree for this smallness only if we improve the quality of the individuals in our Service, their weapons and their mobility. History shows that the few seldom defeat the more numerous unless the former are superior in strategic and tactical mobility.

Thus, the Army sets for itself as an essential objective improved methods of transport on the road, across country, in the air, and on the sea. At the same time we join in recognizing and supporting the requirements of the Air Force and of the Navy for forces able to keep the air and sea lanes open for essential movements in time of war.

How Much Is Problem

It is not difficult to agree that the three Services should contain elements for these categories of forces. The real difficulty is to determine quantities—how to answer the question: "How much is enough?" In this area I am afraid I must ask help from the crystal ball. For example, the atomic retaliatory force is presently made up of both Air Force and Navy units. It would be most helpful to know what the aggregate strength should be and the strength of the contribution from each. Likewise, continental air defense is made up largely of the contributions of the Air Force and of the Army, with the Navy participating to a lesser degree. Here again, many of our problems would disappear if we had an agreed yardstick to determine the ultimate goal and the optimum internal composition of our air defense forces.

A similar need exists to determine competing requirements within the Army itself. What is the proper proportion to maintain between so-called conventional and non-conventional forces within the Army? I am convinced that we must always have the either/or capability, but it is not easy to be sure of the right proportion. As a practical matter I find that it is necessary to be more emphatic in support of the conventional needs of the Army than those arising from the so-called modern weapons.

When funds become tight it is difficult to generate enthusiasm for such rather prosaic objects as machine guns, bulldozers, trucks, and brooms. Quite recently, I have had to argue very strongly the need for an annual replacement program for our motor transport. Someone has suggested that the only way to be sure of getting such a program is to have our research and development people produce a truck with an atomic warhead. With that assist, we might have a reasonable chance of putting wheels under the automotive program."

CORDINER PLAN "HIGHLY IMPORTANT"

General Taylor was asked if the pace of promotions was a major morale problem in the Army today.

The general reminded his audience that it had taken him 13 years to make captain, then added that though promotions certainly are important, there are other more urgent matters.

He cited specifically the need for stability of assignment, adequate housing, and adoption of the Cordiner Report.

The Chief of Staff said the Cordiner proposals are "highly important" to assuring retention of the personnel that the Services need.

The general also was asked what would be the Army's attitude toward a President who is a Reserve Naval Commander instead of a former Regular Army general.

General Taylor won a burst of applause as he said:

"I would assure the Naval Reserve Commander the complete loyalty of the United States Army."

GENERAL TAYLOR'S PRESS CLUB SPEECH (page 11) made it clear that the Army wants its proper share of responsibility for development of space weapons. His reference to an open-door to the "Milky Way" (The Journal 21 December) attracted wide press attention. Newsmen were impressed with the general's skill in handling a barrage of questions that followed the prepared address. There is no question that his failure to hold periodic press conferences at the Pentagon has handicapped the Army's effort to get its story across to the public.

SECDEF MCELROY'S DISCLOSURE upon his return from Europe that the Pentagon would seek roughly a billion dollar supplemental for the current fiscal year is expected to assure adequate M&O funds for Service activities, particularly with regard to SAC flying time. General LeMay's strong testimony on this problem during the Senate missile inquiry is known to have shocked legislators.

TIED TO THE BUDGET INCREASE probably will be an Administration request that the $275 billion debt ceiling be lifted. It was this ceiling, as much as anything else, which provoked the ill-timed budget cuts of the past Summer and Autumn.

A CONGRESSIONAL INQUIRY can be written down as a certainty in the wake of the disclosure (Page 1) on the Navy's foulup on paying a former officer $3777.16 which he apparently was not entitled to receive. Aside from the fact that Members of Congress have sharply criticized dropping a retired military man from the rolls because of a civilian conviction, there will be an inquiry into administrative processes.

THE BLUEJACKET'S MANUAL, famed aid to sailors, is sailing at full steam ahead in the missile age. The 15th edition, completely revised, has just been published. It's available at Exchanges, Ship's Stores and the U. S. Naval Institute, Annapolis, Md.

THE FORTHCOMING INQUIRY by the House Armed Services Committee on the overall defense posture will take up where the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee's work ends. The Senate group has concentrated primarily on missiles.

CHAIRMAN VINSON of the House Committee, who set the stage for reorganization action at the Pentagon in the wake of the 1949 hearings on the B-36-Supercarrier scrap, will demand more detailed testimony on the JCS structure than has been presented in the Senate. Don't be surprised if the result is an updated "Unification and Strategy" report by the House Committee.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE GAITHER Committee will be sought by any Congressional committee that decides to go into a study of any reorganization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff system. Current reports are that the Gaither group study had considerable to say on the organization of the Department of Defense and its system of supplying military advice to its top echelon.

GEN. NORSTAD'S REVELATION that NATO military circles want intermediate range ballistic missiles based on sea as well as on land recalls The Journal's report in its 14 Dec. issue that Adm. Wright's SACLANC command with its missile capability would play a major part in the NATO conferences. NATO's Atlantic Fleet with its missile cruisers, destroyers, and submarines could supply Europe with mobile missile bases capable of getting in close to the enemy, thus making IRBMs the equivalent of ICBMs.

STRIKE BACK, SACLANC'S big exercise in the Norwegian Sea last September and October, demonstrated the Fleet's ability to get into the Norwegian Sea, close to Russia's territory, undetected. Doubtless this exercise made a strong impression on our European allies.

WARNING by Gen. Norstad that conventional forces will still be needed following the introduction of missiles is a reemphasis of the importance SACEUR places upon his "ground shield," which unfortunately has never attained the 30-division objective set for it some time ago. Readers should not misinterpret the expression "conventional forces," for in today's parlance it includes highly mobile rocket and missile launchers plus tactical atomic capability.

THE HOLIDAY SEASON was made brighter throughout all areas where U. S. Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps forces are stationed, for wherever they are they extended their good will and assistance to their needy neighbors. Many an orphanage and charitable institution in far away lands rang with song and cheer because of the presence of American uniformed neighbors.

THE FOLLY OF OUR up-and-down policy of supporting national defense is nowhere more evident than in 1957's effect upon the aircraft industry. During the Spring and Summer when the Administration was saying that we were short of money and had to cut back on defense expenditures, thousands of workers were discharged and some firms pushed close to the wall. Yet there is now no doubt that money will be forthcoming and these firms will be asked to expand again to produce missiles and additional aircraft. Much of the skilled labor force will have been dissipated into other channels and recruitment and training will cost more and take time.

THE ATOMIC CAPABILITY of the Army's 3d Infantry Division at Ft. Benning, Ga., which is headed for NATO duty in Germany beginning next March, will be put to special field tests. The Army wants to determine the proficiency of soldiers in handling the Honest John rocket and the 8-inch Howitzer, both of them capable of firing nuclear warheads.

THE SUPERSONIC CHEMICAL bomber contract awarded to North American Aviation puts that firm back into bomber building after years of manufacturing such top flight fighters as the F-86 and F-100. The projected new bomber will burn one of the new exotic fuels and will be capable of flying faster than 2,000 miles per hour, at altitudes of greater than 70,000 feet and for distances described as "intercontinental." SAC's Lt. Gen. Griswold revealed last week that it will ultimately replace the B-52.

New Army Concept Puts Greater Stress On Leadership, Inf. School Grads Told

The new concept under the Army's Pentomic organization of dispersion and regrouping places greater responsibilities on the battlefield officer, the deputy director for Army military personnel management told student officers at Fort Benning.

Brig. Gen. Charles W. Rich spoke to 362 graduates of the U. S. Army Infantry School's basic officers classes No. 2 and 3, of which 2d Lt. Ernest A. Simon, and 2d Lt. Robert T. Rawls, were honor graduates.

Gen. Rich said he had consulted with 27 graduates of the basic course to gather information on the problems that the new graduates may face.

Foremost, these officers pointed out that the integrity and leadership of the officer is more important than ever, he added.

"Profit from mistakes in tactical problems," he advised. He said officers can profit from the experience of non-commissioned officers. They should be receptive to NCO's, Gen. Rich stated.

He advised the graduates to be prepared when they address their men. They should not bluff, he said.

The speaker stressed the importance of physical conditioning for officers and their men. Be alert to your men's need for passes, furloughs and promotions, the general added.

GI INSURANCE DIVIDEND FOR '58 WILL BE ABOUT SAME AS THIS YEAR

REGULAR annual dividends of $262 million will be paid to 5,300,000 WWI and II GI insurance policyholders next year, Veterans Administration said 18 December.

The dividends will be paid as near as possible to the anniversary date of each policy during calendar year 1958.

The dividend declarations do not include the non-participating post-Korea type of GI insurance since the law makes no provision for dividend payments on those policies.

The two dividend declarations are:

1. National Service Life Insurance (NSLI), which originated in WWII, $240 million payable to approximately 5,000,000 policyholders.

2. U. S. Government Life Insurance (USGLI), which originated in WWI, $22 million payable to approximately 300,000 policyholders.

Dividends will be paid to both term and permanent plan policyholders.

The NSLI declaration of $240,000,000 is approximately $30 million greater than the amount distributed in 1957, but individual policyholders will not necessarily receive more in 1958 than in 1957. Generally speaking, VA said, they should receive about the same.

The $30 million NSLI increase came about when approximately 400,000 policyholders in military service cancelled their in-service premium waivers and resumed premium payments thus establishing eligibility.

Concerning the USGLI regular annual dividend of $22 million, VA said permanent plan policyholders will receive approximately the same amount in 1958 as in 1957.

Term USGLI policyholders may receive slightly higher dividends in 1958, because, among other factors, the mortality and disability experience for this group is becoming more favorable, VA said.

6th Army, USAREUR Will Test Program For Permanent Detail of Law Officers

Permanent Law Officers, the Army's counterparts of civilian judges will be assigned to serve in every Army General
Court Martial to be held in the Sixth U. S. Army area and Alaska under an experimental program conducted by the Sixth Army's Staff Judge Advocate's Office. Directed by the Department of the Army, the program will also be tested by U. S. Army, Europe.

The program which goes into effect
1 January, is designed to reduce the number of reversals and re-trials ordered by judicial authority at the Department of the Army and the Department of Defense level on the basis of judicial error.

Under the present system, members of the Judge Advocate General Corps are selected to serve as Law Officers for General Courts in addition to their other duties. Under the new procedure, the permanent Law Officers will serve in that capacity on a full-time basis.

Col. Walter O. Beets, Chief, Judiciary
Division, Sixth Army Judge Advocate
Section, Presidio of San Francisco, has been selected as Senior Permanent Law Officer for the eight Western States, and will also serve as law officer on General

Courts held at the Presidio.

The eight states have been divided into three circuits, similar to civilian circuit courts with the other permanent law officers having offices at Ft. Lewis, Washington, and Ft. Ord, California. Ft. Lewis will also serve U. S. Army, Alaska.

Selected as permanent Law Officer for the Ft. Ord area is Col. Charles G. Gross.
Colonel Gross's last assignment was Chairman of the Board of Reviews, Judge
Advocate General's Office, Washington,
D. C.

At Ft. Lewis will be Col. Cameron F.
Woods, former Staff Judge Advocate at that post and Lt. Col. Wilson Freeman, former legal advisor, Office of the Comptroller of the Army, Washington, D. C.

The permanent Law Officers were selected on the basis of judicial temperament and thorough knowledge of military law and the administration of military justice.

SERVICE FAMILY NOTES

MRS. EDWARD R. LEWITZ (left), chairman of the Military Police officers' Wives Club, and Mrs. Raymond B. Ramsey (right), wife of the Deputy Provost Marshal General of the Army, welcome Mrs. Haydon L. Boatner (center), wife of the new Provost Marshal General of the Army.

MISS Jane Le May, daughter of the Vice Chief of the Air Force, General and Mrs. Curtis Le May, has come home from Stephens College in Missouri, where she has been studying design, to spend the holidays with her parents at Quarters B-12, Ft. Myer, Va.

Miss Le May started off the holiday whirl with a dinner and dancing party in her home on 21 December. There were between 30 and 40 guests, many of whom are the sons and daughters of the Le Mays' military circle of friends. Mrs. Le May served her famous Chinese Dinner with a Christmas theme. Miss Katie Cabell and Miss Mary Lawson helped Miss Le May with the party.

Belvoir OWC Has Xmas Sing—

Snowflakes and holly boughs decked the Mt. Vernon room of McKenzie Hall, Ft. Belvoir, Va., for the annual Christmas party given by the Officers' Wives Club the evening of 17 December.

In the receiving line were Mrs. David H. Tulley, Honorary President and wife of the Commanding General, and Mrs. Frank Milner, Club President.

Mrs. William Smith, who was master of ceremonies, introduced the talented Washington organist, Miss Penny Martin, who entertained during dessert and coffee with Christmas arrangements. These were followed by a selection of traditional carols, led by Sp3 Herbert A. Deutsch and sung by the Engineer Center and Ft. Belvoir Men's Chorus, winners of the 2d Army Entertainment Contest. As a finale, Col. A. Schlafl, accompanied by Mrs. W. B. Erwin on the piano, sang "O Holy Night" and "White Christmas" and led the gathering in refrains from familiar Christmas carols.

Big Christmas For SSM&A Club—

The Christmas tree at the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club canteen, traditionally donated by the Marine Corps, this year was the gift of the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Randolph McC. Pate and was gaily decorated by the JANGO members, who wait on the canteen tables on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays throughout the year.

Over 100 Servicemen staying at the Club, on Christmas Day were guests of the Club's Board with a festive menu, which included hams and turkeys donated by the Quartermaster Officers' Wives Club, the Navy Doctors' Wives Club and a friend of Mrs. Herman Feldman, the Club's President. Homemade cookies, candies and cakes were brought in by Mesdames Maxwell D. Taylor, Arleigh A. Burke, Curtis E. LeMay, Walter Bedell Smith, Charles P. Cabell, Bruce Bradley, Dudley Hale, W. P. T. Hill, Ralph Wilson, E. A. Trickey and Donald Stonecliffe. Helping Mrs. Norman L. Peterson with the decorations were Mesdames Clyde D. Eddleman, Emerson L. Cummings and Schuyler Pyne. Others giving time and thought to the Club's Christmas program were Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and Mrs. Ralph J. Canine, the 2d Vice President and the 1st Vice President, respectively.

Service Sons Named—

Three first classmen at Valley Forge Military Academy—all sons of Army colonels—have been nominated for appointments to the U. S. Military and Naval academies.

They are Philip J. Galanti, son of Col.

P. J. Galanti, TUSAE-JUSMMAT, APO 254, N. Y., and R. Jefferson Hornaday, son of Lt. Col. Ralph J. Hornaday, USA—Special Troops, SETAF, APO 168, N. Y., both nominated for West Point, and Frederick B. Cummings, son of Col. Edwin A. Cummings, Ft. Meade, Md.

These nominees are among six permitted the Wayne, Pa., school by virtue of its "honor school" rating in the ROTC program. They will take their entrance examinations in March.

Finance New Years—

Maj. Gen. Harry W. Crandall, Chief of Finance, and Mrs. Crandall, and Brig. Gen. Norman E. Youngblood, The Assistant Chief of Finance, and Mrs. Youngblood have sent out invitations for a New Year's reception from two to four o'clock in the Club Room of the Shoreham Hotel.

Marine Wives Honor Mrs. Arleigh Burke—

Mrs. Arleigh Burke, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, and Col. Julia Hamblet, Director of the Women Marines, were guests of honor at the luncheon held by the Marine Officers' Wives' Club on 18 Dec. at the Army-Navy Country club.

Hostesses for the luncheon were the wives of officers of the administrative division of Marine Corps headquarters.

Serving on the committee were Mrs. H. R. Barr, Mrs. H. A. Anderson, Mrs. J. G. Juett and Mrs. F. C. Bacon.

Following the luncheon a program of Christmas carols was presented by an ensemble from the Marine Corps Band. Members and guests contributed toys and games to the Toys for Tots drive.

Service Jrs.' Cotillion Has Xmas Dance—

The Christmas dance of the Army, Navy, Air Force Cotillion was held at Patton Hall, Ft. Myer, Va., 26 December, with music by the "Mellotones," headed by M/Sgt. Leo Kellar, of the U. S. Air Force Band.

In addition to the regular members of the Cotillion, many former members, home for the Christmas holidays, attended as guests, and were welcomed by junior hosts and hostesses, Lee Butler, Woodie Vaughn, George S. Robinson, Jr., Frank A. VanWagoner, Susan Neal, Catherine Hayes, Dale Bilbo, Judy Capito. Guests of honor at the dance were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick Coleman, 3d.

As a special feature reflecting the Christmas spirit, everyone attending took home a favor souvenir, and refreshments were served late in the evening.

Cadets of the Service Academies at West Point, Annapolis, New London and Denver, who were in the Washington area during the holidays, were also invited to the dance.

TC Christmas Party—

The Transportation Corps held its traditional Christmas dinner dance 14 December, at the Ft. McNair Officers' Club. The Deputy Chief of Transportation, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Samuel R. Browning headed the receiving line, which included Maj. Gen. and Mrs. E. C. R. Lasher, Col. and Mrs. John G. Fort, chairmen of the event, and Col. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Lentz, the latter, President of the Transportation Corps Women's Club.

Festive holiday decorations added to the gaiety of the occasion, and Jack Morton and his orchestra furnished the music for dancing.

Notice to Subscribers

Effective January 1, 1958, the subscription rate of The JOURNAL will be $7.50 a year for individual members of the U. S. armed services and their families, and $10 per year for civilians, organizations or any subscriptions not addressed to individual names.

Compare this rate with the original $5 per year charged for The JOURNAL in 1863 . . . or the $6 per year rate in 1864 . . . and you'll realize what an amazing job The JOURNAL has done through the years of "holding the price line" for its readers. For The JOURNAL today at $6.50 is considerably larger and better than The JOURNAL of 1864 at $6.

The purpose of this announcement, however, is not to pat ourselves on the back, but to give you an opportunity to renew your present subscription, or to order a brand new one, before the price increase.

- A 5-year subscription today costs only $24.50 and will save you $13 as compared with the new yearly rate.
- A 2-year subscription today costs only $11.50, and will save you $3.50 as compared with the new yearly rate.
- A 1-year subscription today costs only $6.50 and will protect you for 52 extra issues against the January 1 rate increase.

So take advantage of this opportunity to save money by filling in and mailing this handy order form today.

Funeral and burial services were held at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D. C., for Admiral John Dale Price, USN-Ret., who died at the U. S. Naval Hospital, San Diego, Calif., 18 December. He was 65 years old.

A native of Arkansas, Admiral Price attended the University of Arkansas before entering the U. S. Naval Academy, from which he was graduated in 1916. During WWI, he served aboard a minesweeper in the North Sea. Assigned to the USS Langley, the Navy's first carrier, in 1924, Admiral Price received a Commendation for his carrier flying experiments. He did the first night carrier landing and the first "cross-deck" take-off during this period. During the first year of WWII, Admiral Price commanded Navy aircraft off the West Coast and was then assigned to the Naval Training Station at Jacksonville, Fla., until February 1943, when he was named Commander of Fleet Air Wing 2. In this command, he served with great distinction, participating with air support in the attacks on Kwajalein, Eniwetok and Wake Island, and successfully using the Bat, the first fully automatic guided missile, against Japanese shipping and land targets. In 1945, Admiral Price took command of the Navy Operations Base on Okinawa and was credited with the development of the Island as an advance base. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Miriam Johnston Price.

AF Research

ter-continental ballistic missiles and intermediate range ballistic missiles. "There are many improvements to be made in size and costs, in improved accuracy, reliability and mobility."

• Develop solid propellant land-based weapons to replace our tactical missiles such as the Matador.

• Do everything that we can in the field of satellites, and manned and unmanned space vehicles.

• Place more emphasis on our SAGE system and BOMARC.

• Accelerate development and production of a ballistic missile early warning radar system.

• Get on with the development and production of active ballistic missiles defense system.

• Improvement surface-to-air medium range missiles, with capabilities from sea level up. These "would be follow-on missiles to BOMARC."

• Put considerably more funds into basic research and applied research "across the board."

Former SecNav Urges Missile Changes

The President of Aerojet-General Corporation, Mr. Dan E. Kimball, a former Secretary of the Navy, has called for an end of the double management of the nation's missile programs by each of the services and the Department of Defense.

Speaking before the Washington Section of the American Rocket Society 18 December, he asserted that this double management results in "confusion and inefficiency."

"A Research and Development organization has no place in the Department of Defense," Mr. Kimball said, "where it duplicates the separate efforts of the Armed Services." He said there was no large and competent technical and procurement staff in the Defense Department.

Citing the appointment of Dr. Killian as a Special Assistant to President Eisenhower for Science and Technology as a good start in the right direction, Mr. Kimball advocated the establishment of the post of Director of Missiles for all-over direction of the missile program.

The Aerojet President said that the responsibility of the Director of Missiles would be to make "firm decisions as to missions and types of missiles—and then let the Services develop them by proper assignment. These decisions, I repeat, should be made by the Director, and not made for him, by a staff of Civil Service assistants.

"It should be up to the Services to direct the planning for operational use of missiles," he said. "The Services should also have full responsibility for research and development, procurement, production and testing of the missiles allocated to them."

"We've got to have double-barreled action," Mr. Kimball said, "pursue to perfection the missiles we're making now and set up a 10-year program and stick to it." He also emphasized the need for more research to advance the state of the art, as well as to develop new components and techniques which will be needed in the future.

"We can do this," he said, "if we have simplified policy direction from the top—from Dr. Killian and his advisers; and if we get a Director of Missiles with authority to determine the types and missions and allocate the development and production to the Service which will admittedly be responsible for their development and operation."

Industry Firms Aid Army Missile School

The recent addition of 50 new instructors to the Philco Corporation staff has swelled the faculty of the U. S. Army Ordnance Guided Missile School at Huntsville, Ala., to 325 persons.

Ten nationally known corporations supply the school with 166 civilian instructors on a contract basis to teach the operation and maintenance of parts and components for the Army's rapidly increasing armory of new weapons.

Companies in the program, of which the Philco group is the largest are Douglas Aircraft, Associated Aero Science Laboratories, Western Electric, Firestone Tire and Rubber, Gilfillan Bros., Radio Corporation of America, Chrysler Corp., North American Aviation and the Martin Company.

Total strength of the school is nearing the 2,000 mark.

It is the Army's only activity devoted exclusively to guided missile training.

Extruding Titanium Cast Ingots Cuts Jet Costs

Development of new production manufacturing methods to extrude titanium jet engine parts directly from cast ingots has reduced the costs of finished parts as much as 40%, according to a joint announcement made by Wright Aeronautical and Metals Processing Divisions of Curtiss-Wright Corporation and the Manufacturing Methods Branch of the Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

The new techniques developed as the result of two years of work under an Air Force Program sponsored by the Manufacturing Methods Branch, Headquarters AMC and monitored by Joseph Volmer and Theodore Felker, of AMC, provide lower manufacturing costs and far greater utilization of raw material—the ratio of finished part weight to the raw material weight. In addition, the procurement cycle for parts is considerably shortened. The cost advantages of the cast ingot extrusion method result directly from the lesser amount of raw material required and the lower cost of the ingot material. Specifically, the cost of cast ingots is approximately half the cost of forged billets for use as extrusion stock.

REP. PAUL J. KILDAY, San Antonio's Representative in Congress, pays an informal visit to the new Home Office Building of the United Service Automobile Association at San Antonio, Tex. The GAR-1D Falcon air-to-air guided missile has been tested for suitability to established tactics at Eglin AFB, Fla.

Under the supervision of the 3241st Test Group 42 missions with 504 sorties were flown in a six week period by falcon-carrying F-102 Delta Daggers.

No actual firings were made during the tests. Intercepts were recorded by the use of specially designed instruments.

The Falcon is supersonic, electronically guided missile used in interceptor type aircraft. It can be launched from the interceptor without visual contact of the target. Manufactured by the Hughes Aircraft Corp., it has a 20 inch span, is 77.8 inches long and 20 inches high.

Single DoD Quality Control Specification For All Procurement Inspection Urged

A single Department of Defense quality control specification was recommended by Frank O. Macek of the Headquarters, Air Materiel Command Quality Control office, in an address to the Ohio-Kentucky Inspection Interchange Committee at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

The proposed inspection clause would apply for procurement inspection to all contractors under contract with the Department of Defense.

Technological advances in weapon concepts dictate need for revision of procurement inspection techniques during conversion to the missile program, Macek said, and only through coordination and unified effort of all Government agencies can the program succeed.

Today there are over 9,000 inspection inter-service agreements concerning contractor facilities in which the Air Force is a party, Macek said.

Lt. Col. J. Bostick, chief of Dayton Air Procurement District, as chairman of the Ohio-Kentucky Committee, welcomed the conferees.

Other speakers included Col. J. C. Schneider, chief of Quality Control at Headquarters, Air Materiel Command; Capt. Doyen Klein, Inspector of Naval Materiel at Cincinnati, O.; Capt. Burton A. Davis of Dayton Air Force Depot, Dayton, Ohio; George A. Smith, Corps of Engineers, Pittsburgh, Pa.; A. M. Rager, Corps of Engineers, Louisville, Ky.; L. D. Mancini, Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, Akron, Ohio; L. O. Kaiser, Army Signal Corps, Chicago, Ill.; J. F. Reelsnyder, Army Transportation Supply and Maintenance Command, St. Louis, Mo.; and C. R. Lewis, Transportation Division, Headquarters, Air Materiel Command.

In addition to the organizations represented by the speakers, also attending were representatives of the Air Force from Cleveland, Ohio, Mobile, Ala., and Wright-Patterson; of the Navy from Cleveland, O., and Wright-Patterson; and of the Army from Columbus, Cincinnati, and Cleveland, O.; and Detroit, Mich.

Procurement And Maintenance Missions Win Honors For Two WRAMA Colonels

Col. Paul I. Doty and John van O. Weaver of Robins Air Force Base have been awarded commendation ribbons for meritorious service in accomplishing the procurement and maintenance missions, respectively, of the Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, Ga.

Maj. Gen. A. V. P. Anderson, Jr., WRAMA Commander, presented the commendation ribbons in a ceremony held in his office. He praised Colonels Doty and Weaver highly for their outstanding devotion to duty. Both officers are retiring from the Air Force.

Colonel Doty, WRAMA Deputy Commander, received the first oak leaf cluster to the commendation ribbon for his exceptional service as WRAMA Procurement and Production Director for a three-year period ending September 1957.

"Colonel Doty demonstrated outstanding managerial ability in placing large procurements for critical aircraft bombing and navigational systems, components, and support equipment," the citation read in part.

"His use of keen judgment, exceptional administrative ability, and determined efforts have resulted in saving countless monies for the government and in effecting expeditious procurements of vital materiel."

Colonel Weaver was commended for his outstanding administrative ability and application to sound management principles while serving as WRAMA Maintenance Engineering Director from April 1956 through Nov. 1957.

"Through his extraordinary leadership, ingenuity, organizational and managerial abilities he successfully accomplished the WRAMA maintenance mission as well as WRAMA world-wide prime commodities maintenance responsibility," the citation read in part.

Colonel Doty has accepted an engineering position with Hughes Aircraft at Culver City, Calif., and will begin work on 6 Jan.

Colonel Weaver, who has been active in civic affairs in Warner Robins, plans to continue to reside in that city upon his retirement.

He is a member of the city planning board, past president of the Warner Robins senior high school PTA, and a member of the Toastmasters Club.

Navy Names Missile Cruiser For FY '58

The three heavy cruisers scheduled to be converted to guided-missile cruisers in the fiscal 1958 program will be the Chicago (CA-136), Albany (CA-123), and Fall River (CA-131).

They will receive Talos and Tartar surface-to-air missile armament.

The cruiser conversions will consist of installing guided-missile launching capabilities both forward and aft. In previous conversions, such as the Boston (CAG-1) and Canberra (CAG-2), conventional armament has been retained forward while missile launchers were installed aft.

Shipyard assignments also have been made. The Chicago will be converted at San Francisco Naval Shipyard, the Albany at Boston Naval Shipyard, and Fall River at Puget Sound Naval Shipyard.

Six light cruiser conversions now underway—five from the fiscal 1957 program and one from the fiscal 1956 program—will have missile launchers aft and conventional armament forward. Three will be armed with Terrier, three with Talos.

Other work, such as improvement of habitability, will be done on the three heavy cruisers in conjunction with the installation of missile capabilities.

The Chicago and Fall River now are in Reserve. Their selection was based partially on the consideration that they had received no modification or improvement since WW II. The Albany was selected from the active fleet.

The Air Force will publish early in 1958 a new manual telling how to use commercial communications services, including telephone and telegraph facilities.

Besides distribution through usual military channels, the manual will be sold through the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. as an aid to civilian communication companies.

Included in the publication will be methods for obtaining commercial communications services, and procedures for the prompt payment of bills. The instructions contained in the manual will be applicable to leased long-line and local services, as well as to nation-wide and worldwide networks.

The manual was prepared under the direction of Col. William H. Lyle, Chief of the Communications-Electronics Division, Air Command and Staff College, Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

Services Tell Nurse Promotion Plans

From first page—

she said, indicate that Army Nurses "regard the new law as a career incentive of the highest value."

Capt. W. Leona Jackson, Director of the Navy Nurse Corps, said her experience has been the same as that of Colonel Haynes.

The Act, she said, "has been a tremendous boost to morale." She told THE JOURNAL that, "for the individual Navy Nurse, this is the biggest step we have been able to take since we became a commissioned corps."

Col. Francis I. Lay, Chief of the Air Force Nurses, said "the effect on the morale of Nurses in the Air Force has been very gratifying." She disclosed that "applications for Regular commissions have more than doubled," since passage of the legislation.

Army Promotion Report

Of the promotions made thus far under the Act, the biggest number have been in the Army.

More than 200 officers have been named for promotion to major in the Army Nurse Corps, and about 450 already serving in that grade are expected to be given their permanent majority within the next few weeks.

In addition, the Army has selected 16 Medical Specialist Corps officers, who also come under the terms of the Act, for promotion to major. More than 35 other AMSC majors also are expected to be named shortly for permanent promotion to that rank.

Prior to passage of the Act, the Army was authorized only 74 permanent Nurse Corps majors and 35 permanent AMSC majors.

An Army board is now meeting to name ANC and AMSC officers for promotion to the grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel. During Congressional consideration of the legislation, the Army said about 20 Nurses and about three AMSC officers would be selected for lieutenant colonel during the current fiscal year in promotions involving insignia changes. At that time, it was not anticipated there would be any promotions before fiscal 1960 which involved insignia changes for lieutenant colonels.

Army spokesmen declined to estimate how many officers will be selected by the boards now in session.

In Congressional testimony, the Army said it planned to authorize about 715 insignia changes to the grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel and major during the first five years after passage of the Act. In addition, hundreds of permanent promotions were planned for officers already holding temporary commissions in those grades. The insignia changes were to include 606 in the Nurse Corps (500 to major, 101 to lieutenant colonel and five to colonel), and 190 in the AMSC (79 to major, 29 to lieutenant colonel and one to colonel).

Colonel Haynes also told THE JOURNAL that applications are arriving in the Office of the Surgeon General from a number of officers of both Corps who are now eligible for Regular Army commissions. She said "Most of these officers will be appointed in the grade of captain."

New Navy Captain

In the Navy, one Nurse has been promoted to the rank of captain since passage of the Act. She is Capt. Ruth A. Houghton, Chief of Nursing Services at the Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md. In addition, 51 Nurses have been named to fill vacancies occurring this year in the grade of commander.

Captain Jackson said the Navy had 28 commanders when the Act was passed and, in contrast, "will have a continuing on-board count for this fiscal year of 75."

Meanwhile, Navy boards have recently selected about 700 lieutenants for promotion to lieutenant commander, but names of these officers will not be announced until the selection list is approved by the President. It is expected that the approved list will be out before the end of the month, possibly next week.

Captain Jackson said the report of this selection board "will give substance to the traditional wish of 'A Happy New Year' to many Navy Nurse Corps officers." She added that "1958 will indeed start auspiciously for them."

One Navy officer, Capt. Kenneth L. Knight, also has been selected for four-stripe rank in the Navy Medical Service Corps.

At the time the Act was going through Congress, the Navy estimated it would promote about 888 officers during the first five years after passage of the Act. These will include about 800 Nurses to lieutenant commander, 77 to commander and four to the rank of captain. Seven members of the Medical Service Corps are expected to be promoted to captain through fiscal '62.

More "Juniors" In Air Force

In the Air Force, approximately 190 Nurses have been promoted to the permanent grade of major, including 120 who previously were serving as captains.

Colonel Lay said plans for promotion to the grade of lieutenant colonel and colonel "have not been completed." She noted that "large numbers of promotions will not be involved in these grades because Air Force Nurses are a young group in terms of years of Service. As a result of this, the number of our Nurses eligible for promotion to the two senior grades is somewhat limited."

During Congressional testimony, the Air Force estimated that it would make about 130 insignia changes during the first five years after passage of the Act—all in the grade of major. Of these, 125 were slated to be made in the Nurse Corps and five in the Medical Specialist Corps.

USAREUR School Gives NATO Officers Training In Use Of Atomic Weapons

(The NATO meetings in Paris have now focused attention on the training of senior commanders in Europe in the employment of atomic weapons. A Special Weapons Branch of a unique Army school at Oberammergau is playing a key role in this training effort. THE JOURNAL publishes herewith a special report just received from this school.)

A VISITOR to Oberammergau, the quiet and beautiful little village in the Bavarian Alps of Germany, world famous for its centuries-old reenactment of the Passion Play every 10 years, notices at once the contrast its tranquility and antique charm present to the rest of our bustling, ever more rapidly changing world.

There is, however, another contrast, which belies the appearance that this village of pious, unsophisticated farmers, herdsmen and woodcarvers is unaware of the present world situation. Overlooking Oberammergau, from the side of a cross-topped mountain, and housed in barracks formerly occupied by units of Germany's crack mountain troops, is one of the world's finest and up-to-the-minute military schools. This is the U. S. Army Intelligence, Military Police, and Special Weapons School, Europe, which was founded years ago.

The 12 years since its founding have added and created many new requirements for specialized training in the fields with which the school is concerned. Consequently, the period has been one of considerable growth and has seen the enlargement of the school's mission and the extension of its courses to military personnel of NATO nations.

THE SCHOOL AT OBERAMMERGAU, a subordinate command of the U.S. Army Europe and under the operational control of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G2, USAREUR, performs the mission of providing instruction in intelligence, counterintelligence, military police, and special weapons fields.

Thought of by some as a "university" with three schools of learning, because of the level of the material and instruction given, the school under the command of Col. Paul G. Guthrie, is organized in keeping with its name into three academic branches: Intelligence, Military Police, and Special Weapons. A headquarters company and a student company provide administrative and logistical support to the branches and attending personnel.

A European Theater intelligence school was established originally near Dreux, France, 10 Nov. 1945. Later the school was moved from France to Oberammergau where courses of instruction began in January 1946.

The Military Police Branch of the school was activated at Romilly, France in the spring of 1946. In May 1948 it was consolidated with the European Command Intelligence School at Oberammergau.

The Special Weapons Branch originated as a section of the Intelligence Branch in November 1952. In January 1953 this branch began functioning as a separate academic branch.

In the school's first 12 years of operation, more than 40,000 students have been trained in the various courses.

COURSES TAUGHT by officers of the Intelligence Branch prepare personnel of the Army and Air Force in the collecting and processing of information and the production of effective combat intelligence. Students learn such things as map reading, photography, and photo interpretation, and interrogation techniques, with courses tailored to fill the requirements of combat operations.

Because, like all other arms and services, the Military Police meet problems peculiar to Europe in carrying out their assigned mission, the school conducts, in its Military Police Branch, classes in many different subjects. They range from homicide investigation to infantry tactics; from the laws of apprehension, search, and seizure to first aid; and from police public relations to judo.

Students learn how to control and move traffic under European conditions, an important consideration in today's necessarily mobile Army. They learn how to operate Military Police stations and patrols in large European cities and on the autobahns and rural roads, and how to deal with the military and civilian population in various situations.

The school offers, in its Special Weapons Branch, courses designed to orient and train senior commanders of U.S. and NATO forces and their staff officers in the theory of employment of atomic weapons, their effects, and defenses against them.

INSTRUCTION IS GIVEN in both English and French simultaneously. To assist in performing this mission, the school faculty includes officers of the U.S. Air Force and Navy, and of Belgium, France, and the United Kingdom.

Hawkins Barracks, the home of the school, was so designated on 20 September 1954, in honor of Lt. Colonel Jesse M. Hawkins, and intelligence officer who fought with the 2d Armored Division and was killed in action during World War II.

The U.S. Army Intelligence, Military Police, and Special Weapons School at Oberammergau is a strong link in the NATO, USAREUR, and Seventh Army training programs, constantly recognizing additional needs and growing to meet them so that allied personnel in Europe will always receive the latest and finest training in the fields with which the school is concerned.
